What things should we stop doing?

We needed to stop under estimating how much time a task would take. It took us 3 sprints to get down one of the core features that our site desperately needs. We are glad we started it from sprint 1.

What should we start doing?

Getting ready for release one and we should of fixed more bugs from the start so we could do more features at the end. We had to many bugs to fix.

What is working well that we should continue to do?

We meet up and help each other responsible for getting our parts done. We would check in more often with each other and hold more meetings. We responded better when we moved away from slack and went to use group text.

What work was completed, and not completed?

We got the hard stuff done like making the web page look nice and applying the Google API. We did not get a lot of the easy features done as we were doing site clean up and fixing small annoying bugs here and there getting ready for release 1. COMPLETED

1. (Hard) As a user I want to be able to navigate easily through a nice looking website
2. (Harder) As a user I want to be able to supply user content by adding destinations of places
FROM SPRINT 1

NOT COMPLETED

1. (Easy) As a user I want to be able to share tips, risk and regrets of places I have been

What is our rate of completing work?
